Yeah nah, none of them apply. There's two domains. Only 1 exists on trustpilot.

I'm still building the website and I haven't setup a redirect from <https://legionkillfeed.xyz> to <https://killfeed.co> yet, I am new at web development and it's a learning process so I intend on using the .xyz domain for testing before implementing on killfeed.co

Hi name,

We've received your request about Domain Name Change.

It sounds like you're in need of a business profile merge. Here are some reasons you might need to merge two or more business profiles:

1. Identical domains:

- If you have more than one domain, and all of the domains included in the merge automatically redirect traffic to one main domain.
- If you have more than one domain, and each domain shows exactly the same content.
- If you have more than one domain with the same content, but in different languages - usually because you have different business locations.

2. Rebranding:

- If you have changed your business name or brand, and your old domain redirects traffic to your new domain.

3. Business merger and or change of ownership:

- At our discretion, we may also allow profiles to be merged if a business has bought or taken-over one or more other companies/businesses.

If you fit within one of these categories, you'll need to review this article and fill out the Merge Request form at the bottom of the page:
